Oritsegbegbemi Nanna Convicted by a Jury of Assault in the 2nd Degree in Incident that Injured a Rochester Police Officer

Rochester, NY – On Friday, November 6, 2026, a Monroe County jury convicted 40-year-old Oritsegbegbemi Nanna of Assault in the 2nd Degree.

Rochester Police Officers were called to an incident on Treyer Street on February 6, 2026, where Nanna was arrested and charged with criminal obstruction of breathing in a domestic incident. A judge released Nanna and issued an Order of Protection against him. Within hours of his release, Nanna violated the Order of Protection, and a judge issued a warrant for his arrest for criminal contempt. On February 24, 2026, Nanna was arrested for a second time on Treyer Street, fighting with officers as they tried to arrest him, leading to one of the officers being hurt.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney Kristin Sippel of the Major Felony Bureau.

"This was a crime that could have been avoided, and it also highlights the serious nature of domestic cases we deal with in our society," said Assistant District Attorney Kristin Sippel. "This could have had a far different outcome, and we're fortunate the Rochester Police officer's injuries weren't worse. I extend my sincerest thanks to the officers who continue to do their jobs, while risking their lives. I also hope Mr. Nanna can reflect and learn from his actions and make better decisions in the future."

"The criminal justice system has many layers, that's why we rely heavily on collaboration to ensure justice and the safety of our community," said Monroe County District Attorney Brian Green. "We remain committed to fostering a seamless partnership between law enforcement and the judicial system. By doing so, we ensure a more efficient, and accountable justice system that serves the best interests of our community."

Oritsegbegbemi Nanna will be sentenced on January 14, 2027, in front of Acting Monroe County Court Judge Michael Geraci.
